

RRW's Mask Suggestions and Photos

Any mask will be helpful!

Any color is FINE!

It is YOUR choice what KIND of MASK you wear!

Your comfort, fit, and freedom to breathe through your mouth and move your jaw are most important. Also, remember that the mask must cover your nose and mouth even as you sing. You likely already have masks that will work beautifully.

Some have asked about "singer's masks" so I am showing those below. They are pricey.

But please know that the inexpensive surgical masks work splendidly in recent aerosol studies of singers -- second only to the N95 mask. Those disposable surgical masks work well for many face shapes and activities.

This is a disposable, surgery-style mask. You can find these everywhere now and I have gotten mine on Amazon.com. For my face size, comfort, and coolness (temperature not style) this is the winner for me. I workout, teach/dance, and will sing in this. My microphone goes outside of the mask and picks up sound well.

More expensive masks:

Some singers have really liked the Halo mask. It has: adjustable metal for around the nose, boning in the center of the mask (nose to chin) to help keep it away from the mouth, extra chin space, adjustable ear loops, and a filter that is very highly rated. It is sized.

This is the Resonant Singer's Mask. It is fitted with two adjustable straps that do not go around your ears, has adjustable metal for around the nose, extra space for the jaw to move, keeps the mask away from mouth, and has a filter that can be used. If I was to order this again, I would go up a size -- it should stick out away from the mouth farther.

This is the Broadway Relief Project singer's mask. It has adjustable ear loops, adjustable metal for around the nose, extra space for the jaw to move, and keeps the mask away from the mouth. This is the adult size (one size) and there is a child size.
